Adventures of Tad;

A Story for Young and Old.

"Must be something valueble in there, else it would to fas ned up so close; and, if that's so, the owner 'b. advertise it. Anyway, I'll hang on te it till I find out," was Tal's final declsion. He would no more have thought of forcing the lock to satisfy ruriosity than of breaking open a noney-drawer.
A general stle among the passengers together with certsin fragments of conversation which reached Tad's ear, versation which reached Tad's ear, warned him that the end of his journey was at haal. Mrs. John Mason was among those who hegan getting in realiness for departure. As, detaching the clouk from the hook, she withdrew its rich folds from behind her chair. Tad lightly touched the soft for of the linky by way of a position. for of the lining by way of a mute furewell; after doing which he began making his own preparations for leav-lag. That is, he bultoned his threadpare jacket tightly about Jum, ran his fingers through ils mop of curly hair and pulled a shabby cloth cup well over his forehead. Then, with a fast-beating heart, Tad awaited the finale.

Then followed the usual rush for the doors, during which I'ad crept from his hbling-place unnoticed in the general contlusion. Currying the sachel in his hand, he boldly elbowed his way through the crowd, and, with a grent sigh of reliet, found himself standing ou the platferm unquestioned. As he was on the point of turning away Tad suddenly observed a young man whom he remembered having seen at the Broad Street station on the previous evening. A small hluish scar above his right eyebrow hal first attracted Tad's attention, while the person in question was similed by the stove, quite man his own seat. At the time, Tad had vaguely wondered whether the man highly to the vaguely wondered whether the man highly well-defined reasons for doubting. As they walked along together through the busy thoroughlunes Mr. Jones chutted agreeably of the men and things encountered on the way. He hoped Tad would not get cold through the sudden change of climate, as theraw easterly wind swept sharply round the corners of the irregular streets, and he corners of the irregular streets of the store of the uncertainties of something to eat, what the corner of the uncertainties of something to eat, what the corner of the uncertainties of something to eat the corner o suddenly observed a young man whom Ifere Mr. Jones stopped abruptly, and began staring very hard at the few remaining passengers who were runolag the gamutlet of a throng of penned-up hackmea, vocilerating in different keys.

"Why, confound it!" he exclaimed, "here I've been standing taiklag, and let Richards march off up-town with his head as full of business that he's forgotten I'm anywhere in existence! But it's all right"—he went on, thrusting his hand into an inside pocket as he spoke—"ler when Richards telegraphed back from Jersey City to the graphed back from Jersey City to the Brond Street staticn, he offered ten dollars for the return of the papers. So, if I give you the money and take the bag, it'll be just the same, besiden But Tad cheerfully replied that he dhlu't mimit the walk, particularly as he wanted to see what the town was like. "All right," returned Tad, briefly, with more particular reference to the certainties of something to eat, what-ever other uncertainties might be in store for him. And, accretly, Tad felt with a store for him. And, accretly, Tad felt quite able to take care of himself, a four though every thing was not all right—which he had no particularly well-defined reasons for doubting.

As they walked along together through the busy thoroughlures Mr. Jones chutted agreeably of the men and things encountered on the way. He hoped Tad would not get eoid through the sudden change of climate, as theraw and honored position as a member of the learned facely of that lastitution and is quite an eathwists in his present work, he still looks back with long-this destined, as Tad at once saw, as an attachment to the tail of a sunnil and decidedly dirty dog which the girl was hugging tightly against her white corners of the irregular streets, and he even off-red to carry the sackel for him, so that Tad might keep his hands warm by putting them in his pockets. The foregoing propositions are submitted, based upon the idea that no legal opposition be encountered in the construction of the turnpike roads as proposed, by the count or otherwise.

Very respectfully,
John C. Latham.

After some discussion and numerous questions by parties concerned, a vote was taken on the first and second propositions. There were 2284 votes cast, of which number 163 shares voted for the first, and 65½ shares for the second; the insjority ruling, a unanimous vote was made accepting the first proposition.

The proposition in plain terms means that the first $3,000 of the net earnings of the pikes are to go to Mr. Latham and sli above that is to be divided Mr. Latham will get $3,000 and then a 6 per cent, dividend will be declared, including his stock, which would make his dividend 12 per cent. The diabolic character of the crime and the strenuous efforts which were put forth to save Mrs. Druse from the hangman combined to make the execution one of the national interest.

Told in detail the tragedy would make a bulky and sensational volume. Briefly annimarized the history of the case is this: The Druse landity comprised the victim, George Druse, his wife, a daughter Mary, and the whole front of her bodice was at the mole front of predous stones. of the cano is this: This Druse families or of the cano is this: This Druse familiate with glitter of comprised the victim, George Druse, his wife, a daughter Mary, aged 19; a sen George, aged 10; a nephew Frank Gates, aged 14. His wite attempted to again discharge the wite attempted to again discharge the weapon, but it missed fire. She then called in the boys George and Frank, and giring like revolver to the latter, compelled him, under a threat of killing him, to tire it three times. ~ Each shot took effect, and the yieldur rolled off the sight to the ground. Then shot took effect, and the victim rolled off the chair to the ground. Then the most flendish phase of the crime was commenced. Solving an ax, Mrs. Druse commonced chopping upon the need was served from the hody. The head and trunk were then taken into the parler, and for eighteen hours thereafter the family devoted themselves to the task of carving up the scives to the task of carving up the corpee and burning the fragments in the stove. By this means all signs of the crime were made to disappear, but the absence of Druse from his accustomed haunts led to an investi-gation, and little by little the mystery was unraveled, until the horrible

THE SLEEP OF DEATH.

Ago.

Mrs. Willle Pisher, a married wo-twenty-six years of age, living with ther hosband at 141 Sixth, near Main street, committed suicide last night by taking four onness of landamim. At sbont 2:30 o'cleck last night, actered the marrisgo gift of the groom, a superb riviers of diamonds forming a dazzling elrelet of light around the throat of the wearer. In the eare shone large solitairs diamonds, and she escried a large bouquet of pure white orchids and sprays of white liliaes tied with ribbon.

At about 2:30 o'cleck last night, according to evidence gathered by Dr. Milter, she left her room and went at she could be drug stere of Newhouse & Co., at the cerner of Seventh and Market streets, where she had stitled a fear-ounce bottle of landshum. Its unall table and except two letters. Itelurning to her home, she aat down at a small table and wrote two letters, one to her husbami and the other to her sister, Miss Mollie Webb, who lived with them. After this she underseed herself, and, deliberately drinking the drug, lay down on the bed te await the end.

Dr. Monigemery was sent ter, but despite his efforts she died at 8:30 o'ctock. When found ate was insensible, and the deadly drug had so taken pessession of her that no antidote or remedy administered had the least effect. Ceroner Miller began an investigation into the causes that led her te the act. From her insband, sister and neighbors it her instand, sister and neighbors it was learned that she had been in bail health for about two yesrs, and had formed the habit of taking oplum. This had so broken her down in health and mind that it was supposed

"There will be a big schanton, said heto the Commercial, "and It will drag me down to the dogs." Further inquiry failed to elieit anything from the husband, who divided his time between sobbing on a windew-siti and keeping the people in the room quiet.

The letters left by the young woman were written in an almost illegible hand and inour's patient work deciphered only a few sentences.

From what could be learned she was ciated at the prospect of going to a better land and stated in the letter to her sister that sho died to escape a horrible fate which was about to befall her. She made charges, which may not be well grounded, that eer-teln stamlers circulated about her by thin standers erretulated about ther by ther father-in-law and his wife caused her to take her life. She asked her slater to keen her hody out of sight of the Fisher family. She relterated the charges against Mr. and Mrs. Fisher in the letter to her insband. She closed with professions of ever-lecting according and remosted that

The grass seed tilled with the seeds of plantain, certainly does not come largely from the West. It is comparatively a rare field weed to the West. But the assertion is perhaps well founded in respect to the fact that much of the seed is dirty, and also contains the seeds of weeds. It can only be due to had practice in cultivation and cleaning. The West first acquired the confidence of Eastern farnaers in the value of its grass seed threugh its freedom from the seeds of Canada thistic. It is so to-day. This peet does not flourish well in our alluviat prairie sells. Many other weed seeds do, If the allegation of Eastern parties in relation to the impurity of Western grass acceds true, the remedy lies with the farmers. We have mills and separators that will clean seed should be sent out as delivered from the tarasher. There is one other thing to be remembered in the cultivation of grass or clover for seed. It is most exhausting to the soil. Hence the land should be in good heart, and not more than two crops of grass aced should be taken, or ot most three, before the field is given up to pusture, and thereafter to be again brought into the regular rotation of farm crops.—Chicago Tribune.
